On March 4th and 8th 2020, Beatport will continue promoting diversity in dance music with two carefully curated events for International Women's Day. The first includes a workshop, a documentary screening and mixer, in association with shesaid.so and BIMM Berlin Institute. The second takes place at Studio Chérie with Nike, as well creative agency Peach Socials and shesaid.so, and includes discussions on mental health, interactive spaces for physical activity such as yoga and dance, as well as plenty of knowledge sharing.

The March 4th event begins with a Beatport LINK workshop, offering in-depth guidance on how to start building your DJ music collection using Beatport LINK's innovative software, and how to stream tracks in your DJ software.

There will also be a screening of Assurance, a documentary about female DJs in Nigeria directed by Juba, a British-Nigerian DJ living in Berlin, followed by a discussion with the director. Last of all, DJ sets by BIMM Berlin students Tenpointfive (LIVE) and Berlin-based DJ and producer, Bakläxa to round out the evening. This is a free event and all are welcome. The second event, on International Women's Day itself, is called FUTURE MOVES. Floor 1 will have curated discussions focusing on how to maintain balance and sustain a career in the creative industries. There will also be a dance therapy class, which includes a 30-minute session for sharing thoughts and feelings followed by a 60-minute dance class, then a two-hour set from esteemed Watergate resident Jamiie.

Floor 2 allows you to share stories, have photos taken in the booth and explore a carefully curated selection of female-run publications. There will also be chances to contribute to a live installation, and there will be food, drinks, music and plenty of networking opportunities.

These are two fantastic opportunities to share knowledge, stories and gain insight into the industry from some vital new perspectives.
